

Wine has been known in India since prehistory. Artefacts of the great Indus civilisation, from the time of the Egyptian Pharaohs, have indicated its use. It was associated with Indus, the warrior god and most popular deity of the Hindu pantheon. It was named Soma and was drunk at religious festivals.

Wines have been mentioned in Indian poetry for many centuries, the most famous being the verses of the renowned master Omar Khayyam in his celebrated Rubaiyat (1048-1148). The exquisite dishes in Indian cuisine offered at Vujon are flavoured with no less subtlety and restraint than many items found in European gourmet menus, and as such may be successfully married with good wines.

At Vujon we have a bespoke range of wines, carefully selected to complement the beautifully flavoured and delicately spiced dishes of India.
